Introduction

The effectiveness of regional development largely depends on the openness and effective functioning of the local governance system. The uniqueness of the mahalla institution is that it, as the lowest level of governance in direct contact with the population, allows it to identify the needs of society and respond to them promptly.

In recent years, reforms aimed at developing the mahalla system and increasing its economic independence have been consistently implemented in Uzbekistan. In this process, the issue of ensuring the transparency of the mahalla budget is of particular importance. Because the open and effective use of financial resources plays an important role in strengthening public trust.

This article analyzes the theoretical and practical aspects of ensuring the transparency of the mahalla budget within the framework of the Uzbekistan 2030 Strategy.

Main part

The issues of local governance and budget transparency have been widely studied internationally. In World Bank studies, budget transparency is assessed as an important factor in reducing efficiency and corruption in public administration.

The OECD emphasizes that an open budget system increases citizens' participation in public administration. This serves the development of democratic institutions.

Also, studies conducted by UNDP show that increasing transparency at the local level has a positive impact on social stability and economic development.

This study used the methods of systematic analysis, comparison and generalization. The issue of transparency of the mahalla budget was studied based on the current political and legal documents of Uzbekistan and international experience.

The research methodology was based on an institutional approach. This approach allows analyzing the local governance system as an institution.

Within the framework of the Uzbekistan 2030 Strategy, special attention is paid to developing the mahalla system and expanding its financial capabilities. In this process, ensuring openness and accountability in the use of budget funds is identified as a priority task.

Ensuring transparency of the mahalla budget leads to several important results. First of all, citizen participation in public administration increases. The population actively participates in the decision-making process by being aware of the financial processes in their area.

Transparency also reduces the risk of corruption. Open distribution of financial resources ensures their targeted use and strengthens control mechanisms. Another important aspect of neighborhood budget transparency is increasing social trust. Citizens trust government agencies, which ensures stability in society.

The following table reflects the main impacts of neighborhood budget transparency:

Indicator Result	Indicator Result
Citizen Participation Increases	Citizen Participation Increases
Corruption Level Decreases	Corruption Level Decreases
Resource Use Becomes More Efficient	Resource Use Becomes More Efficient
Social Trust Strengthens	Social Trust Strengthens
Regional Development Accelerates	Regional Development Accelerates

Analysis shows that neighborhood budget transparency not only improves financial management, but also has a positive impact on community development.

Conclusion

The analysis shows that ensuring the transparency of the mahalla budget is an important strategic direction within the framework of the Uzbekistan 2030 strategy. This process increases the efficiency of local governance, expands citizen participation, and strengthens social trust.

Ensuring the transparency of the mahalla budget can effectively use financial resources, reduce the risk of corruption, and accelerate regional development.

As a result, the formation of an open and accountable budget system is one of the important factors serving the sustainable development of Uzbekistan.
